

2024 National Judge

Mohammad Asadian grew up in Vancouver, BC, and holds a B.Sc. in Natural Resources Conservation from the University of British Columbia's Faculty of Forestry. With over 17 years of experience in municipal environment, his expertise lies in community engagement and volunteer management.

Starting in recreational programming, Mohammad transitioned to parks, where his academic background aligned with his passion. Throughout his career, he has predominantly led initiatives in community development, engagement, and nature education.

For the past 6 years, Mohammad has been a vital part of the City of Coquitlam team. During this time, he has overseen events of varying scales, orchestrating initiatives with over 1000 volunteers. His involvement in the CiB program marked a significant milestone, where he not only learned but also helped lead the program's implementation. Supported by the City of Coquitlam, Mohammad has taken on roles as a Provincial and National Judge for Communities in Bloom.

Looking ahead, Mohammad is eager to engage in discussions surrounding municipal and community issues, bringing his wealth of experience to the table.
